DISNEYLAND PARIS

Writer Jo Usmar grabs some Mickey Mouse ears for an all-singing, all-dancing weekend

SEE

The Disneyland resort is split into two parks: Disneyland - which is more traditional and teeming with pirates and princesses - and Walt Disney Studios (think film and animation such as Toy Story and Cars). Want to meet your fave characters and have a snap with them? When you arrive, head to the Toon Studio in Walt Disney Studios or the Princess Pavilion in Disneyland's Fantasyland first thing to avoid huge queues later in the day. Alternatively, book lunch with Cinderella and co at Auberge De Cendrillon restaurant, around £52 each for a three-course meal, and £28 for kids. Don't miss the Magic On Parade show, 5.30pm daily, where Mickey and friends dance through the streets.

DO

Pitch-black roller coaster Space Mountain in Disneyland is great

Fyi

Getting there

Eurostar runs from London St Pancras, Ebbsfleet and Ashford to Marne-la-Vallée-Chessy from £74.50 return (Eurostar.com).

Stay

The Dream Castle Hotel is a hit for princesses big and small. Rooms cost from £100 per night B&B (Vi-hotels.com).

Win

One reader will bag a night at Dream Castle Hotel, passes to Disneyland Paris and return Eurostar tickets for a family of four. Visit Fabulousmag.co.uk for your chance to win (Sun-membership required).*

for thrill-seeking adults, as is Big Thunder Mountain, a Wild West journey at break-neck speed. Meanwhile, the Tower of Terror in Walt Disney Studios is the best ride in the whole place - leave your stomach behind as you rocket to the top of a hotel before plummeting to the basement. Kids should head to Buzz Lightyear's Laser Quest and the new Ratatouille World. A day ticket with access to both parks costs £74 for an adult and £66 for a child (Disneylandparis.com).

EAT & DRINK

You're not allowed to take your own food into Disneyland (bags are searched at the gates), but there is a picnic area outside the main entrance. Expect to pay about £9 for a fast food meal inside the park, or head to Walt's on Main Street in Disneyland for a steak, from £20. Fancy a tipples? Grab a cocktail at the Sports Bar in Disney Village, £7 - but don't drink and ride! F
